

SPICE Resources – Conditions of Use

Copyright

Copyright of SPICE educational content ("SPICE Resources") belongs to The University of Western Australia unless otherwise indicated.

Copyright collecting societies

Please note that any dealing of SPICE Resources is not subject to Section 113P of the Copyright Act 1968 Statutory Licence administered by the Copyright Agency (CA), and should not be included in any copying survey conducted by CA or subject to any payment to CA, or any other copyright collecting society.

Usage

Use of SPICE Resources is restricted to teachers and students at Australian and New Zealand schools ("Users"). Other individuals and organisations may be granted access to SPICE Resources on application to UWA.

Users are granted permission to reproduce, edit, recompile and include in derivative works SPICE Resources subject to the following conditions.

- Electronic copies of SPICE Resources may be made for backup and for teaching purposes within the school.
- Printed copies of SPICE Resources may be made solely for teaching purposes within the school.
- Spice Resources may be copied to individual computers, servers and mobile devices solely for teaching purposes within the school.
- All copyright information attached to SPICE Resources (including information attached to individual items and works within the Spice Resources) must be kept intact or otherwise reproduced with any reproduction, edition, composition or derivative work.
- Other third-party copyright material contained in SPICE Resources may be subject to separate licence conditions. If so, these conditions will be included in, and can be accessed via the item itself or accompanying information.

- SPICE Resources may be used only within the school or for school associated work (such as student homework).
- SPICE Resources (including backup and other copies) and derivative works may not be distributed or transferred to other schools or organisations.
- SPICE Resources are provided on an “as is” basis. UWA gives no warranty regarding accuracy, completeness or suitability of SPICE Resources for any particular purpose.

All questions involving copyright and usage should be directed to copyright-lib@uwa.edu.au.
